

Briefing for Relay Take-Off Judges

At each end of the pool (note: actual placement of “side” Judges will be at the Referee’s discretion. It will depend on the configuration of the pool, glare, etc.) The Relay Take-off Judge should be in position to clearly see the incoming swimmer touch the wall, even if that means getting wet.

Take-off Judges should stand up straight. Look at toes of departing swimmer. Once swimmer’s toes have lost contact with wall, look down for touch of incoming swimmer. Relay Take-off Judges will not raise their hands if they see an early take-off. (Note: Stroke & Turn Judges still raise their hands if they see a stroke or touch violation.)

After each and every exchange of swimmers, Judges must mark their relay take-off slips—an “O” if the exchange was good; an “X” if it was early. Judges must make sure to mark the correct row, the number corresponding to the swimmer who is taking off, and the event number on the slip. After the last swimmer has entered the water, the Referee will designate an official to collect and compare the relay take-off slips. If both Judges on a lane at the same end of the pool saw the same infraction, the Referee will disqualify that team.

Side Judges must be in position to see all lanes for which they are responsible. They will mark an “O” or an “X” for each exchange for each lane.

Briefing for Relay Take-Off Judges

At each end of the pool (note: actual placement of “side” Judges will be at the Referee’s discretion. It will depend on the configuration of the pool, glare, etc.) The Relay Take-off Judge should be in position to clearly see the incoming swimmer touch the wall, even if that means getting wet.

Take-off judges should stand up straight. Look at toes of departing swimmer. Once swimmer’s toes have lost contact with wall, look down for touch of incoming swimmer. Relay Take-off Judges will not raise their hands if they see an early take-off. (Note: Stroke & Turn Judges still raise their hands if they see a stroke or touch violation.)

After each and every exchange of swimmers, Judges must mark their relay take-off slips—an “O” if the exchange was good; an “X” if it was early. Judges must make sure to mark the correct row, the number corresponding to the swimmer who is taking off, and the event number on the slip. After the last swimmer has entered the water, the Referee will designate an official to collect and compare the relay take-off slips. If both Judges on a lane at the same end of the pool saw the same infraction, the Referee will disqualify that team.

Side Judges must be in position to see all lanes for which they are responsible. They will mark an “O” or an “X” for each exchange for each lane.